

30. A newly posted teacher writes to the head teacher to change all the chalk boards in the school to white marker boards. Which of the following will be more convincing to the head teacher to agree to this suggestion?
- Chalk is not friendly to the eye and will run short in the market.
 - It makes the teacher and the classroom look neat.
 - The white board is less messy and doubles up as a projection screen.
 - White marker boards are replacing chalk boards in these modern times.
31. Students in a class are engaged in a lively discussion on the Yaa Asantewa War. Which of the following comments by the teacher to a particular student best his role as an active listener in this discussion?
- "If I understand correctly, you're saying that local resources affected the outcome of the war."
 - "Please restate your idea to be sure that everyone heard it."
 - "What have we learned about the ways in which the availability of resources affected war efforts?"
 - "Would anyone else care to elaborate on or debate this idea?"
32. Which of the following is not a characteristic feature of a child-centred education?
- Children learn to get on well with each other.
 - Learning is done at the pace of the learner.
 - The teacher dictates the pace of learning.
 - The teacher serves as a facilitator.
33. The basis of a serious argument between two professional teachers was whether teaching is an art or a science. One of them was of the view that teaching is an art. Which one of the following does not support the view that teaching is an art? Teaching _____
- involves a step-by-step procedure.
 - involves evoking people's interest as you impart knowledge.
 - involves people to whom knowledge is imparted.
 - uses personalised experience in imparting knowledge.
34. After observing some lessons, a circuit supervisor met the teachers and took them through ways of summarising lessons under closure. Which of the following will not feature in the discussion?
- Making reference to notes on the chalkboard.
 - Questioning in order to determine the extent of students' knowledge.
 - Reviewing to reinforce major terms, facts and concepts.
 - Summarising only lower-level information and ideas from the lesson.
35. A teacher in a class of students with varied characteristics and needs is preparing a presentation on a new instructional topic. The teacher can best ensure the clarity and accessibility of the presentation by adopting which of the following approaches?
- Creating note cards as a reminder of important points to address
 - Emphasizing important information by using broad and expansive gestures
 - Repeating key ideas more than once using exactly the same language
 - Using a variety of visual tools to support information that is provided verbally